Radice Rind 2026: Technical Analysis of the Cherrywood with "Faux Bamboo" Shank

The 2026 production from the Radice workshop confirms, with this medium-sized compact Cherrywood, the Cucciago-based studio's ability to blend classic geometries with avant-garde aesthetic solutions.

Aesthetic Illusion: The "Faux Bamboo"

The element of greatest interest to collectors in this specimen is the faux bamboo shank. This is a distinctive technique that the Radice family has mastered for decades:

- Construction: Unlike pipes that use organic bamboo inserts, this shank is carved entirely out of briar.
- Execution: Through precise manual modeling and subsequent differentiated staining, the nodes and typical nuances of a bamboo plant are reproduced, while maintaining the structural integrity and thermal resistance inherent to briar wood.

Geometry and Finishing

The model is a Cherrywood, a "sitter" shape designed to remain balanced autonomously when placed on a flat surface.

- Rind Finish: The series features a bold rustication and a dark coloration, ideal for optimal management of the bowl's external temperature.
- Internal Mechanics: The chamber features a precise cylindrical bore with a capacious volume, ensuring consistent combustion and easy tobacco loading management.

Heritage and Craftsmanship

The creation of this piece in 2026 bears witness to the vitality of the Radice workshop. The work of Marzio and Gianluca Radice focuses on the precision of the fittings and the quality of the drilling, ensuring that every pipe is an efficient smoking instrument. The use of an acrylic stem guarantees the stability of the black tone and resistance to oxidation, minimizing aesthetic maintenance.

This Cherrywood Rind stands as a benchmark piece for those seeking a pipe with a strong visual identity, supported by the solid construction typical of the Cucciago school.
