Ser Jacopo R1 Rusticated Rhodesian Pipe | Italian Handmade

This creation, included in the R1 grading, offers a solid, geometric, and high-impact vision.

The pipe presents itself as a magnificent, muscular, and compact interpretation of the traditional straight Rhodesian model. Compared to classic standards, the artisans of Ser Jacopo have skillfully given the piece a proud stage presence and a firm, pleasant grip. The briar body is entirely enhanced by a deep and energetic rustication finish, executed by hand with mastery. This particular texture not only imparts a rustic and natural character to the pipe, but also offers an important technical advantage: the increased surface area facilitates heat dissipation, ensuring a decidedly cooler smoke.

The true geometric centerpiece of the design lies in the diamond shank, whose crisp and rigorous facets blend flawlessly with both the base of the bowl and the stem junction. This is a high-precision process that requires an extremely steady and expert hand to maintain the perfect symmetry of the edges along the entire line of the shank.

Inside, the pipe conceals a fairly capacious bowl, characterized by a slightly conical chamber drilling. This specific internal geometry is particularly appreciated by experienced smokers: the progressive, millimeter-by-millimeter reduction in diameter toward the bottom of the bowl accommodates the natural compression of the tobacco during combustion, promoting a constant draw and an excellent concentration of flavors, especially with dark tobacco-based mixtures or complex blends.

To complete this pipe, we find an elegant black acrylic mouthpiece, an unalterable material that does not undergo oxidation and maintains its luster over time. The mouthpiece adopts a tapered design that harmoniously follows and concludes the rigorous lines of the shank. As a final seal of authenticity and prestige, the unmistakable silver letter "j" shines out, an emblem of the rigorous quality standards signed by Ser Jacopo.
