Big Ben Spectrum 223 Pipe: Matte Blue Finish and Contemporary Design

The Big Ben Spectrum 223 is a Dutch pipe with a strong and distinctive character, created to offer a fresh and profoundly modern interpretation of pipe smoking. This model draws immediate attention due to an exceptionally successful contrast of colors and materials, making it ideal for those seeking a sophisticated instrument that steps away from more traditional standards.

Unique Geometries and Solid Presence

The 223 model features a medium-sized, slightly curved shape, structured to ensure excellent balance both in the hand and in the mouth. The hallmark fluid, continuous lines of the Spectrum series are recognizable here, enriched by a unique structural detail: the sides of the bowl are finely flattened—a geometric touch that gives the pipe a solid presence and an ergonomic grip.

The bowl boasts a generous capacity with cylindrical drilling, engineered to promote an even burn and optimal rendering of tobacco blends.

Refined Elements and Finish:

- The Finish: A sophisticated blue lacquer coated with a matte surface layer, delivering a clean, modern look that is silky to the touch.
- The Natural Rim: The top edge of the bowl (the rim) is intentionally left natural. This choice creates an elegant chromatic contrast and subtly reveals the authentic grain of the briar.
- Accenting Details: The round shank is embellished with an aluminum ring, mirrored with geometric precision at the junction with the black acrylic stem, offering a harmonious, coherent, and essential design.

Practicality

Tailored to the needs of modern smokers, the pipe is internally designed with a chamber to accommodate a filter, ensuring a dry, cool, and comfortable smoke.
