Ashton Brindle XX Pipe: The Elegance of the Silver Stand-Up Zulu (Year 2026)

The Ashton brand was founded in 1983 by Bill Ashton Taylor after more than twenty years of experience within the historic Dunhill manufactory.

This specific specimen belongs to the Brindle XX classification. The chosen shape is an interpretation of the Zulu, presented here in a straight variant. The engineering of the bowl and the oval shank features a calibrated flat base that makes the pipe a stand-up, capable of remaining in perfect vertical balance when placed on a flat surface.

The collectible value of the piece is enshrined by the Made in England marking and the 226 stamping, which identifies the year of production: 2026 (according to the brand's proprietary coding). Embellishing the shank is a refined silver band.

Technical Characteristics and Construction Specifications

- Design and Geometry: Straight Zulu shape with a stand-up base. A slender yet stable silhouette, enriched by a deep and uniform sandblasting that highlights the natural grain of the briar.
- Bowl and Walls: The bowl is of medium/small capacity, perfect for short smoking sessions. The chamber features a cylindrical drilling.
- Mouthpiece: Made of cumberland with a tapered profile and a standard lip. Cumberland offers superior softness compared to acrylic.

Smoking Experience and Intended Use

Thanks to its compact dimensions and extraordinary lightness, this Ashton Brindle XX proves to be the ideal instrument for outdoor smokes or during walks. The perfect balance and reduced weight do not tire the jaw, while the stand-up functionality makes it extremely practical during breaks, eliminating the need for a pocket pipe stand.
