Forge de Laguiole Pipe Companion in Briarwood and Satin Stainless Steel

The Excellence of French Craftsmanship: The History of Forge de Laguiole

The name Laguiole (pronounced "Laïole" in the Occitan language) refers to a small village in Aveyron, set on the Aubrac plateau, and a cutlery tradition dating back to 1828. Following a period of decline caused by 20th-century conflicts, traditional craftsmanship returned to its birthplace in 1987 with the founding of Forge de Laguiole®.

Today, in the avant-garde manufacture designed by Philippe Starck, master artisans forge blades using exclusively French steel processed at the Acières de Bonpertuis. Every creation embodies the rugged and captivating spirit of the Aubrac plateau, ensuring an authenticity and build quality unmatched by imitations.

Pipe Companion in Briarwood and Satin Stainless Steel: Design and Practicality for the Pipe Smoker

Part of a refined selection of accessories for slow-smoking enthusiasts, this Forge de Laguiole pipe companion is the perfect blend of aesthetic elegance and everyday functionality. Crafted with a handle made of fine briarwood and finished in satin stainless steel, this tool is designed to elevate every moment of relaxation with style.

Features and Technical Details

- Fine Materials: Briarwood delivers warm tones and unique grain patterns to every individual piece, while the satin stainless steel offers wear resistance, easy maintenance, and an understated, refined look.

- Rounded-Tip Blade: Specially shaped for pipe bowl maintenance, the rounded tip allows you to scrape and trim the cake to the correct thickness without risking puncturing or damaging the bottom of the chamber.
- Ergonomic and Compact Design: Easy to handle and well-balanced, it is comfortable to use, portable, and ideal for both home use and travel.
