Forge de Laguiole Pipe Tool in Light Horn and Stainless Steel

The Excellence of French Craftsmanship: The Story of Forge de Laguiole

The name Laguiole (pronounced “Laïole”, according to the Occitan tradition) comes from a small village in Aveyron, located on the Aubrac plateau, where the art of cutlery making has its roots dating back to 1828. Following the conflicts of the 20th century, which drastically reduced local production, in 1985 a group of Aubrac craftsmen and enthusiasts launched a project to bring the manufacture of Laguiole knives back to their native region, culminating in the foundation of Forge de Laguiole® in 1987.

Today, the manufactory, housed in an iconic building designed by renowned designer Philippe Starck, is considered a global benchmark for traditional craftsmanship. Each blade is forged from French-sourced steels processed at the Aciéries de Bonpertuis, combining centuries of expertise with exceptional quality standards that set the brand apart from commercial imitations.

Light Horn and Stainless Steel Pipe Tool: Natural Elegance and Practicality for the Pipe Smoker

Part of the range of accessories dedicated to the culture of slow smoking, this Forge de Laguiole pipe tool stands out for its sophisticated technical and aesthetic qualities. Crafted with a natural light horn handle and a stainless steel structure, it combines the uniqueness of traditional materials with outstanding practicality for everyday use.

Technical and Functional Features

Natural materials and fine finishes:
Light horn gives each piece its own unique and unrepeatable shades, grain patterns and natural translucency. Stainless steel provides excellent resistance to oxidation, hygiene and ease of maintenance.

Rounded-tip blade for bowl maintenance:
Specifically designed for the internal maintenance of the pipe, the rounded-tip blade allows the smoker to level and adjust the cake to the proper thickness, helping to prevent the bottom of the bowl from being pierced or scratched.

Ergonomics and functionality:
Its compact, well-balanced construction makes the tool easy to handle and pleasant to the touch, making it ideal both for the home smoking ritual and for carrying with you.
