L'Anatra dalle Uova d'Oro – Bent Sandblasted Freehand with Silver Ferrule

This Italian artisan pipe by L'Anatra dalle Uova d'Oro was handmade in Pesaro, Italy, and represents a modern freehand interpretation of the classic bent pipe. Its design is distinguished by a sleek, contemporary silhouette, with a bowl that tapers towards the base in a conical profile. Viewed from the front, the outline distinctly recalls the shape of a ship's keel.

The body features a well-defined, deep sandblast, carefully executed to emphasize the natural texture of the briar. The treatment enhances the grain of the wood, creating a richly tactile surface with pronounced relief and subtle variations in the way it catches the light.

The bowl walls maintain a balanced thickness, providing protection around the chamber, which offers medium capacityand features slightly conical drilling designed to support an even tobacco burn.

A refined silver ferrule enhances the junction between the shank and stem. The stem is made of black acrylic, with a conical profile and a slightly fishtail bit, providing a comfortable feel in the mouth. Set into the back of the stem is the distinctive stylized silver duck head, the unmistakable hallmark and signature detail of this Pesaro-based maker.
