Shape Geometry and Smoking Performance

The 4113 designation identifies a medium-sized pipe (Group 4), featuring the characteristic rounded, softly contoured bowl of the Apple shape, seamlessly connected to a curved shank. This geometry provides a comfortable grip and helps position the centre of gravity lower, reducing strain on the jaw when clenched.

Even Sandblasted Finish and Smooth Rim: The sandblasting process evenly highlights the natural grain of the briar, creating a distinctive tactile texture while helping to dissipate heat. In contrast with the textured bowl, the flat, smooth rim provides a refined visual accent and makes filling the chamber easier.

Precision Cylindrical Drilling: The medium-capacity chamber features carefully executed cylindrical drilling, designed to ensure a consistent, unobstructed airflow from lighting through to the bottom of the tobacco chamber.

Ergonomics and Construction Comfort

The curved shank is fitted with a tapered Cumberland ebonite stem, distinguished by its unmistakable marbled pattern in shades of brown and terracotta. The slightly fishtail bit provides a slim, stable and comfortable resting point between the teeth, helping distribute the smoke evenly across the tongue.

Well-balanced, compact and elegant, the Dunhill Cumberland 4113 is a practical and versatile pipe, ideal for those seeking a classic example of British pipe-making tradition to accompany different moments throughout the day.
