Dunhill The White Spot Cumberland 1103: The Compact Elegance of the Billiard Shape (Group 1)

The Dunhill The White Spot Cumberland 1103, manufactured in England, is an emblematic example of fine British pipe-making craftsmanship in a compact format. This model interprets the classic straight Billiard silhouette in the diminutive proportions of Group 1, complemented by the celebrated Cumberland sandblasted finish, appreciated for its harmonious interplay between the brown tones of the briar and the warm streaks of the mouthpiece.

Design and Geometry: Classic Proportions in a Compact Format

The model code 1103 identifies a very small pipe (Group 1), designed to offer exceptional lightness and maximum discretion.

Classic Straight Billiard: The geometry strictly adheres to the traditional principles of the Billiard shape, featuring a vertical cylindrical bowl and a perfectly balanced straight shank. Its compact dimensions make the pipe remarkably lightweight, minimising strain between the teeth and making it particularly convenient to carry in a jacket pocket.

Cumberland Sandblasted Finish: The sandblasting process enhances the natural grain patterns of the briar, creating a textured surface that is pleasant to the touch and effective at dissipating heat, despite the relatively thin bowl walls.

Tobacco Chamber Geometry and Smoking Performance

Small-Capacity Tobacco Chamber: The combustion chamber accommodates a modest tobacco charge, making this model ideal for short smoking sessions, quick breaks or the careful appreciation of particularly intense and full-bodied tobacco blends.

Slightly Tapered Drilling at the Base: The internal draft hole features a subtle taper in its terminal section, towards the bottom of the tobacco chamber.

Construction Details: The Cumberland Mouthpiece

The shank connects to a Cumberland ebonite mouthpiece, recognisable by its distinctive brown and terracotta streaks, which echo the natural shades of the briar. The fishtail bit provides a slim, stable and comfortable fit between the lips, distributing the smoke evenly.

The unmistakable White Spot stands out on the upper side, serving as the historic hallmark of quality and craftsmanship of British pipe manufacturing.
